Our Story

Founded in Belgium in 2020

Established communities in Europe, North America, Australia, Asia, and 30+ countries

Target: Chinese women overseas

Established first country office in Belgium, plan to assemble offices in US and Britain

Overlooked and Neglected: Overseas Chinese Women Suffering from Domestic Violence

By the end of 2019, there were approximately 20.7 million overseas Chinese women. As for population distribution, Asia takes the lion share, followed by the Americas, Europe and Oceania, with the smallest percentage of Chinese women in Africa. According to a random sampling study conducted in the greater Boston area on the Chinese community, 14% of the sample group reported domestic violence suffrage, while 42% indicated knowing at least one Chinese female who had experience of domestic violence.

Due to the lack of in-depth research on domestic violence concerning overseas Chinese women, we have utilized comparables method. Avoice took several countries as benchmarks, used the number of local Chinese and the local domestic violence rate, and then estimated the scale of Chinese women suffering from domestic violence. Result is shown on the right.

The number of overseas Chinese women:
20+ million

Challenges & Obstacles for Overseas Chinese Women facing Domestic Violence

○ The existing domestic violence relief system cannot address their specific needs.

Difficulties in obtaining financial and safety guarantee in a timely and sufficient manner.

○ The lack of willingness to seek help through official channels.

Due to their lack of understanding of local laws and regulations on domestic violence, together with insufficient awareness of legal rights protection, and anxiety as migrants, they are less likely to seek help through official channels while experiencing domestic violence.

○ Difficulty to get support from external social relations.

As an ethnic minority, it is difficult for them to get support from external social relations, because language, culture and nationality all act as hurdles in their better integration into local society.

○ The lack of ability and awareness on self-protection.

The vague understanding of domestic violence, the lack of self-protection education and the deep-rooted traditional gender concept has severely weakened their awareness of taking domestic violence precaution voluntarily and their ability of self-rescue.

○ Less attention is paid to domestic violence against overseas Chinese women.

Attention to overseas Chinese women, a marginalized group, is obviously insufficient. There have been no in-depth study, let alone relevant comprehensive intervention programs. Therefore, Overseas Chinese women, who are at high risk of suffering from domestic violence, have become the neglected and silent group in the protection system for victims suffering from domestic violence.

Case Interview 1

Interviewee 1: from Weifang, Shandong Province

---

“I came to Belgium to live with my ex-husband in September 2018. By the end of October, my ex-husband started to show signs of violence after getting drunk. But my family and friends all told me to put up with him during our chats. His parents called me and assured me that he would never do it anymore. I then chose to believe in him one more time. However, during March and April of 2019, we had quarrels and fights again. But he promised me in front of my family that this would not happen again, so I gave him another chance. When it came to the end of 2019, he hurt me again. I just could not stand it and made up my mind to leave him. I moved out. Now when thinking back about it, I should have called the police in the first place. If I did, I could have more police records and spent less effort afterwards.”

A typical case of domestic violence: repeated domestic violence history of the abuser; victim suffering due to familial pressure

Case Interview 2

Interviewee 2: from Yunnan Province

“I came to Italy in 2009 and moved to Netherlands in 2016. Last Christmas, I found out that my ex-husband was having an affair with another women. And he beat me. There were only that woman, her son, my ex-husband and my daughter. He and the woman denied their relationship afterwards. Since my daughter was too young to be a witness for the police, my appeal at the Italian procuratorate was denied. I thought it was so unfair. Over these years, I have been in legal battles with my ex-husband over custody of my children and property of my family. It is really stressful because I am living abroad and there are difficulties in communication. My ex-husband is Dutch so there are a bunch of advantages for him since the battle is taking place in a country that he was born in. But I will never give up. I am fighting just for my rights and interests. I am fighting for my kids and for their future.”

In order to prevent domestic violence from happening again, victims need not only psychological care to cultivate strong mental power, but also legal tools to protect themselves. Avoice provides professional legal assistance to safeguard the legitimate rights and interests of Chinese women overseas.

Case Interview 3

Interviewee 3 : from Guangzhou

“I started my overseas study life as a student, and met my boyfriend at that time, and then formed a family. Soon thereafter, we had a child. We came from totally different cultures, which meant that our thinking patterns were also quite different. And such difference determined that our life was full of friction especially when we experienced a hasty transition to family life. Sometimes the friction was just about a little baby-sitting thing, but the anger can boil over into direct and violent action. Once, probably due to the suffer of postpartum depression and in a fit of anger, I threw a plastic basin at him and he started hitting me and pinning me to the ground.

Another time, when I was four months pregnant with my second child, we had a very emotional quarrel during a trip about problems of our child’s future life. In that quarrel, I had my glasses knocked off. For a variety of reasons, I did not leave immediately. But the continuous dizziness and headaches upset me and I was very afraid of the impact on my unborn baby. So I took my son with me to the hospital for a check-up. When the doctor found out about the abuse, he called the police. Later, I learned that local laws prohibit domestic violence, not to mention I was pregnant when going through the violent actions. In fact, what hurts me more in my heart is that my child had to witness all this at such a young age, and I feel very sorry for my child. It had a huge impact on my life and my work.”

The second most common case of domestic violence: choose not to escape in order to provide a stable environment for the child. But remember, only by guaranteeing your own safety, can you give your child a settled life and bright future! Avoice has a dedicated psychological team to provide psychological support services.

From the Interviewee

"For a long time, I believed that I was the only one who had ever experienced the hardships and unfairness that I had encountered in my life. There are other victims out there in the world, who suffered domestic violence abroad, whom didn't want their loved ones to worry about them, which were forced to endure the strain alone. The people of Avoice have shown me what it means to belong to a caring, supportive group."

Avoice is a community that help protect huaman right and dignity, we will always be here for you!
